

Award Nominations are being accepted:

New Frontier Award

The individual honored with the New Frontier Award is someone who is new to the field of Addictions Treatment. They must have been in the field for two (2) years or less and have demonstrated commitment and dedication in efforts through treatment, education, or other avenues to advance in the field of addictions, treatment and prevention.

Distinguished Service Award

The individual honored with the Distinguished Service Award is someone who has demonstrated commitment and dedication in efforts through treatment, education, or other avenues in the field of addictions treatment and prevention.

WVAADC Counselor of the Year Award

The recipient of this award is one who represents what we all strive for: commitment and dedication to the profession and treatment of addicted individuals. This addiction professional is one we will recognize as having the qualities and dedication to be named WVAADC's Counselor of the Year.

Russ Taylor Award

This award can be presented to any person who has shown a dedication to the field of addictions in various ways. This person does not need to be a member of WVAADC. Areas of work or participation to be considered for this prestigious award are prevention, treatment and recovery. The nominee should have substantial participation on local, state, or federal levels within our profession.

Jim Hearn Scholarship

This scholarship is available to any association member in good standing. An individual is ineligible for this scholarship, if they have received one in the last five (5) years.
